Dalajiel, the City of Delight, has a monopoly on a powerful medicine. Their millennium old domination of the drug's production and distribution has made them the wealthiest city in the Known Lands. Their nightly festivals that transform the city in celebration, their technological marvels, their soaring bridges and elaborate tiled facades, their luxuries, their opulence, all of this, was built on the trade of the drug Dalajiel, named for the only city where it could be produced. Some called it a utopia. This book follows the villains of the story. Burobai and Mousefoot are on a mission to break the monopoly, to steal the secret of the drug's production, and in so doing, will bring about the Fall of Dalajiel.
