Elva and Chester are space aliens who look like humans but have been on Earth since the year 1100 with the goal of helping humanity develop more empathy and compassion. (The rest of the beings in the galaxy don't want us flying around out there until we do.) The duo have no human habits to contend with, but they are extraordinarily responsive to chocolate. However, Elva and Chester find human behavior baffling, and continually see their plans twisted by human responses. Consequently, nearly everything wrong on this planet over the past thousand years, like the Leaning Tower of Pisa and Easter Island, was caused by one of their historic debacles. Can they save/improve the earthlings.
