Worth. Unloved. Pathetic. Abuse is all he knows. That, and the fact that he's sixteen years old - or so his brother claims. He has two older siblings - they might be twins, but he's not sure - a seemingly deadbeat mother, and a schizophrenic father. Don't ask him for his name. He doesn't have one. He doesn't deserve a name. For years "the boy" has been living in his family's basement, locked up and hidden from the eyes of the world known as Outside. The only reason he knows that other people exist is because of the small window slab in the basement. Every day he climbs to it and watches the same girl walk by at the same time. She's beautiful. Like his sister, but somehow different. And one day, she sees him.
