Violet, 71, spirited but increasingly forgetful; Katherine, nearly as old and twice as inhibited; and newly married, former old maid Sophie join forces to supply Kathy's dying friend Rita and her cancer victim friends with marijuana to ease their discomfort from chemotherapy. In their act of mercy, cooking "bongo brownies" and other cannabis-spiked food for medicinal purposes, the three women each have personal epiphanies. But the women's activities unwittingly connect them with Mafia drug trafficking and murder, and suddenly the ladies have more to worry about than merely their dealing illegal drugs.
