This fourth book in the Detective Chief Inspector Bill Harrigan series, gives Harrigan no relief from the twists and turns that plague his every case. When the body of murdered art critic Eric Weiman is found by two young lovers seeking a soft, warm and private place to know each other intimately once more, they had no way of knowing that the young girl's lost silver crucifix would spark an investigation that would lead Harrigan into the world of counterfeit art, diamond smuggling, infidelity, blackmail and murder. Come with Harrigan and DS Sarah Throgmorton as they follow the clues down a path that leads them through a world absorbed with British Aristocracy, canal boats, sailing mishaps, fake masters and forbidden sex. Once again, it is only through Harrigan's tenacity, courage and confidence in his own ability that will ultimately lead to true justice being achieved.
