One accident - a freaking car crash. That's all it took to send my brother's and my life into a tailspin with no end in sight. I was going to be something. I was going to be the best. I had the Olympics in my sights. And it all went to shit in one flash. Brayden wasn't ready to raise a younger sister when I was thrown into his lap. He had his life and everything going for him. Thankfully, he was still drafted to his dream hockey team. The same one dad played for when we were growing up. It took time, but I started to get better, started to open up, started skating and even dating again. I even thought I found the perfect guy for me. Isn't it funny how guys hit on you when they know you're not available, but when you're single they won't give you the freaking time of day? I guess the game is more fun that way. And for the captain of my brother's team, that's exactly what I was. A hat trick is three goals in hockey. Some say three is a crowd and they might be right. I was Gavin Hayes' unobtainable goal. *A No Cheating Standalone*
