All her life, daughter-of-the-help Darcy had idolized Roman Zachery, the congressman's son. Their one night of hot, reckless, teenage passion had rocked her world. But Roman had married a proper wife, and Darcy had fled, carrying her fateful secret. Now, eight years later, she would once more face the man who had stolen by her common sense and sanity, the man who could still seduce her with his sweet, loving lies... Bittersweet memories and a lifetime of regrets fanned Roman's fever for Darcy Lightfoot. But to make her stay, he'd have to deceive her once more, hide the truth about his child, and pray his dangerous game didn't destroy their love...
