The cry for states rights is ringing loud and clear throughout America. Although the 10th Amendment does not assign rights to the states, it does identify powers not enumerated to the federal government as reserved to the states and ultimately the people. The 10th Amendment was made tooth by the 17th Amendment, an amendment that would have stopped the founding of our nation cold in its tracks. David Jeffers outlines the damage the 17th Amendment has done to federalism and argues for its repeal. This is a must resource for political parties, tea party organizations, civic groups, homeschoolers, and all levels of public education.
