When a simple honest tribale boy returns home after completing his M.B.A., he never bargained what life had in store for him. In his very first job he became embroiled in a fierce tussle between management and the Trade Union. His propensity to side with the underdog led him to secretly lead the workers revolt resulting in their victory and his ignominious exit from the company. When he finally joined the largest bank in India, his career spanning two decades alternated between his professional brilliance on the one hand and his great love for a girl belonging to another tribe, a community greatly disliked by his dotting mother. The love story and the struggles that ensued against relentless illnesses and a couple of pregnancies gone wrong, tested the young couple's faith to a point where despair seemed to be their destiny. It is a story of love, faith, temptations, struggles, despair ... and hope! A page turner that every reader can identify with..
